

Recreation

Recreation comes in many forms: physical, arts, therapeutic, social and more. Sometimes recreation is offered for individuals with disabilities and sometimes it is offered for the entire family. Recreation benefits children with special needs as well as the family who cares for the child. It can bring a family closer together and increase the child's independence. In addition to finding ways to enlarge their world, children develop their strengths, positive self-image, friendships and inclusion in their community. Explore the possibilities:

Physical Recreation:

The Adaptive Sports program is designed for individuals with orthopedic, visual, and/or other physical/health impairments. Youth and adults alike enjoy the program's range of competitive sports, including swimming, track & field, bocce and more.
